Grimsbury Conservation Area Appraisal

- Conservation area status is awarded to places that are deemed to be of 'special architectural or historic interest'. The intention of designating a conservation area is not to prevent change or development but to positively manage change in order to protect or enhance the special character and appearance of an area.
- The draft conservation area appraisal and management plan is the first review of the conservation area boundary and the second review of the Grimsbury Conservation area, which was first designated in 2007.

The 2007 Conservation Area boundary has been reviewed and no changes are proposed.
